RIGHTS BILL SHOULD COME LATER—JOHNSON

QUEBEC (CP)-Premier Daniel Johnson today rejected the federal government's proposal to begin constitutional reform with a constitutional bill of human rights.

The premier, however, expressed willingness to discuss the proposal "in good faith," but said this should come in the final stages of constitutional reform.

The premier quoted Prime Minister Pearson as saying the human rights bill should be "the starting point of constitutional reform."

U.S. Mops Up Cong Band Inside Saigon

SAIGON (CP) - U.S. infantry and armored units attacked the remains of Viet Cong forces in Saigon today as the guerrillas and North Vietnamese pushed their biggest offensive of the Vietnam war up and down South Vietnam for the third day.

New Thinking Needed

have been clearly drawn in the provincial legislature, but in view of the reactionary stand which Mr. Bennett and his ministers have taken the current situation is less one of Government-versus-the people of British Columbia.

The Social Credit position on the major problem facing Canada today -as it has been expressed by Mr. Bennett, Mr. Bonner and othersappears to be one of resolute resistance to any changes in the constitution to meet the country's twentieth century bi-cultural, bi-lingual requirements. With this recalcitrance goes an apparent determination to hold British Columbia aloof from many of the vital processes of change which are in evidence today-a what-we-have-wehold philosophy which seeks to make the people of this Pacific area citizens of a province before they are citizens of Canada.

Much of the fundamental fallacy in the thinking of Mr. Bennett's government lies in the philosophy expressed this week by Mr. Bonner, that Canada's basic problem, and basic remedy, are economic—that cultural and other intangible considerations are not pertinent to the maintenance of Confederation.

The concept of the purely economic man is, of course, not new. Karl Marx and a host of Communist theoreticians based their doctrines on it, with all the consequent failures and drastic revisions that the world has seen. Yet the materialistic philosophy has been dominant in the speeches and programs of the Social Credit government: in its approach to natural resources, its mining-and-logging-in-the-parks policies, its cash-register treatment of almost all phases of governmental undertakings, its willingness to come to almost any arrangement with domestic or foreign promoters -such as the unfortunate Columbia treaty-which will yield quick cash. So it is in character, although fallacious, for the government now to say that an economic solution would be the whole answer to Canada's current turmoil.

The disturbing aspect of this philosophy is that Mr. Bennett will go to the federal-provincial conference in a few days claiming to speak

THE BATTLE LINES ON THE for the people of British Columbia current constitutional question and prepared to hold the line against any change in the BNA Act -our constitution-or any attempt to develop a bill of rights which would serve to guarantee many of the individual human rights which Government-versus-Opposition than today are the focus of widespread demands. These in particular include the language and cultural rights whose preservation are the crux of the Quebec revolution.

> There are applicable arguments against a bill of rights as the best means of guaranteeing such concepts—such a bill can limit as well as specify rights, it can be altered, it requires for success the same public support in spirit as does the structure of common law and unwritten tradition which we already have today-but these arguments do not affect the central fact of the need for an open-minded approach to a whole new national situation. If Mr. Bennett is going to Ottawa as a spokesman for this province then he should go with a willingness to look at the problem with understanding and statesmanship rather than entrenched prejudice: he should go as a man seeking solutions, not as one closing the door to all proposals because they are

The open-minded attitude has been well expressed in the legislature by Mr. Perrault, the Liberal leader, who urged that "this is not the time . . . to stand across the highway of progress gazing nostalgically into the past." And Mr. Berger, speaking for the NDP, diverged from his leader's original but later amended stand to make specific proposals for a bill of rights, for French-language provisions in British Colubia's educational system, and for a recognition of Canada's dual personality.

Mr. Bennett may serve a purpose at the conference by forcing the advocates of change-to-meetchange to clarify and justify their beliefs and their proposals. But this is a negative, street-barricade role which should not be British Columbia's only contribution to the great movements now under way in this country. One of the most prosperous and fair-minded provincial populations in Canada should not be falsely portrayed as foot-dragging isolationists.

Saturday School

THE DIRECTOR OF COWICHan's adult education program reports with considerable pride the popularity of Saturday morning classes now supplementing the conventional evening sessions in various schools. This development, he points out, answers the hope expressed some time ago by Mr. Leslie Peterson, minister of education, that school facilities would be brought into greater use.

The Cowichan experiment also underscores the point that, unconventional as it may seem, school buildings can quite reasonably be used for classes on Saturdays-a point that should be noted when and if the time comes that school districts, faced with mushrooming student populations, have to go on shift and are hard pressed to find enough hours in the day to give each shift adequate classroom time.

TO CURB INFLATION

By RICHARD PURSER

Tax Rise Plea, Spending Cut Demand

THE Johnson administration to achieve ways and means committee to achieve an income tax increase. It considers the increase urgent to ease inflation at home and ultimately to save the strength of the dollar abroad. The administration's initial appeal was Johnson's four top e c onomic advisers. led by Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler. They faced Committee Chairman Wilbur Mills, a powerful and stubborn opponent of increased taxation unless panied by decreased government spendessentials of the administration case were as follows:

1 Without a tax increase, the budget deficit cannot be cut to a level consistent with stability of the economy.

2. Failure to increase taxes will cause large federal borrowing. This would put upward pressure on market rates of interest, which would be increased still nature of the proposed surcharge. further by the monetary restraints that would be required (in the absence of a tax increase) to counter inflation.

3. The housing industry would suffer most from failure to increase taxes, as it usually does when interest rates are high and credit tight.

4. For the first half of 1968, something like a 31/2 per cent increase in prices is already assured. The rate of increase should be lower in the second half if the tax bill is passed, with excellent prospects for moving toward price stability in 1969. Without the tax surcharge, money demand will continue to grow throughout 1968, resulting in a higher and rising cost of living in 1969, followed by wage increases and then more price increases possibly beginning an inflationary spiral.

5. Failure to take prompt tax action will risk a declining trade surplu overly fast-running economy would cause a boost in imports while higher prices would slow exports. This could have a drastic effect: An import rise as little as 1 per cent faster than the rise in exports would lose the U.S. $300 millions of its trade surplus in one year. All efforts to improve the balance of payments position would run the risk of failure.

Speed Important

The above summary is condensed from the testimony of Mr. Fowler, who said that prompt enactment of the tax increase "is the single most important step" the U.S. can take to improve its balance of payments, protect the dollar, and save the international monetary system. Not only is it essential for the technical reason listed under point (5) above, but as a symbol to Europe of the sincerity of the U.S. government's determination to defend the dollar.

The administration's specific proposal, as contained in the bill presented by Mr. Fowler for the ways and means committee's consideration, is for a 10 per cent surcharge on the income tax of individuals and corporations. (This does not mean an additional tax of 10 per cent of income; it is an additional 10 per cent of the tax previously paid.)

The new tax on individuals would be effective from April 1, 1968 until June 30, 1969, and on corporations retroactively from January 1, 1968 to June 30, 1969.

Mr. Fowler took note of some of the supposed risks in enacting the tax surcharge. It has been said that it could halt economic expansion; but he believed that current and prospective demands are too strong for this risk to be considered serious. But Mr. Mills likes to point out previous inaccuracies in government economic forecasting.

Surcharge "Temporary"

It has been said that "temporary" taxes often turn out to be permanent. Fowler thought there was "solid foundation" for confidence in the temporary

One of his reasons for this, however, was his belief in the end of hostilities in Vietnam within a reasonable time. There will be sceptical comment about this. Besides, it is the rise in domestic, not defence, spending that is bothering Mr.

What about Mr. Mills basic contention that domestic spending should be cut instead of, or at least in league with, a tax increase.

Mr. Fowler claimed that of the proposed $10.4 billions spending increase proposed for fiscal 1969 (July 1, 1968 to June 30, 1969), $3.2 billions are for defence, $1 billion for increased interest payments on the public debt, $1.50 billions for government pay increases already approved by Congress, and $4.7 billions for mandatory payments under laws already passed by Congress. This would leave no leeway for budget whittling.

Probing Soft Spots

Mr. Mills has his own views about that. On his first opportunity this year to renew his grilling of the administration team, he launched into another lengthy probe for soft spots in the allegedly booming economy.

His attitude was that Mr. Fowler and company had made a better presentation than last year, but he still regarded himself as defence attorney for the American taxpayer.

While, as chairman, he reserved his final judgment, there is no doubt that the mood of his committee during questioning of administration witnesses remained decidedly hostile to a tax surcharge, however dire the administration's warnings against failure to act.

Avid Admirer

As a result of Arthur Mayse's astute and realistic column in your January 27 edition I feel strongly disposed to lending my wholehearted support and have thus become even more firmly entrenched as one of his most avid admirers.

Quite rightly, Mr. Mayse expresses the belief that by and large Canadians view U.S. adventures in Asia with mounting concern - this despite frequent crusading sermons by President Johnson and his fellow "hawks." Nor will the statements by Dutch-born Canadian Dr. Alje Vennema allay Canadian distress. Dr. Vennema, head of a medical team in Vietnam and just returned from that pitiful country, says that the Viet Cong are accomplishing exactly what they want. Furthermore, he states that the Americans and South Vietnamese detest each other increasingly more with each passing day.

It is Mr. Mayse's opinion that in any large-scale confrontation, Canada would, like it or not, be sucked into the U.S. military whirlpool. This is all too true. Here lies the tragedy. - Frank, E. Lockyer, 4154 Holland.

L.B.J. For King

By now virtually all Canadians have formed an opinion about the Quebec Liberals' desire to abolish the monarchy. Many of those favoring the change do so because they feel a Canadian monarchy is not in accord with reality, while a republic is.

I suggest they are wrong. I also suggest that those wishing to preserve the British monarchy in Canada are not in accord with reality. Instead, I propose that Canada choose as its monarch Lyndon B. Johnson, with Dean Rusk as Prince of British Columbia and heir to the throne

In view of U.S. ownership of a large majority of Canadian industry, the frequent calls for closer ties (and thus greater subservience) to the U.S., the unqualified support by Canada's press for everything the U.S. does - especially by the Times and Colonist-and now slashing criticism by certain MPs for a CBC that would dare to be less than flagrantly pro-U.S. ... well my modest proposal isn't so radical after all.

Let me be the first to offer my allegience to Lyndon Johnson, king of Canada, with a hearty Sieg Heil!-Bruce Graham, Box 789, Sidney.

FROM WASHINGTON

Cuban Sugar Not Quite So Sweet

TIME was when Fidel Castro could Thardly sneeze without causing a hurricane of talk in the United States. But today no one has even noticed the signs that the Soviets are probably lowering the boom on their troublesome Cuban allies. The latest sign is the Cuban decision to try Anibal Escalante and other ultra-M u scovite Communists as "sectarians and opportunists." When American troubles are so numerous, it is downright enjoyable to contemplate the proof that other people have grave troubles, too. It has always been easy for the Soviets to lower the boom on Cuba. Ever since the missile crisis in 1962, moreover. the Cuban have openly and repeatedly blackguarded and defied Russia. Yet for the sake of Communist good appearances, the men in the Kremlin have gone on subsidizing Cuba to the tune of nearly $1 million a day.

Lowering the boom has always been huge subsidy to Cuba has always taken the form of payments for needlessly times the world price. Even Castro, after for. all, could hardly represent paying only a bit more than the world price for his sugar as a crime against fraternal good relations. Just this kind of concealed but important reduction in the Cuban subsidy is now beginning to be widely suspected. The signs of .some such coming trouble for Cuba began to appear as long ago as tast October, when Pravda published two severe, indeed cruel, commentaries on Ernesto (Che) Guevara's failure and death in Bolivia.

Attack on "Adventurism"

In these articles "adventurism" was equated with "Maoism," and "sad results" were predicted for all "revolutionary adventurists" who forget "the true principles . . . of proletarian intergnationalism." To drive the point home, the articles were signed by the Argentine and Chilean party secretaries, Rudolfo Ghioldi and Luis Corvalan, two Latin-American Communists who had been bitterly attacked by the Cubans for their "orthodox" stodginess.

The sign that the trouble would be located where it would hurt Castro most followed shortly after these two articles appeared. In November the Cuban trade mission, headed by Marcello Fernandez, bounced out of Moscow and headed nomeward in an obvious huff. Significantly, Fernandez paused in Paris, obviously hoping for a French alternative to Moscow's money; but the bill was apparently too big for Gen. de Gaulle.

The sign that the trouble was very deep indeed then followed, when the Cuban delegation to the Soviets' 50th anniversary celebration turned out to be headed by the lowly minister of health, Jose Machado, instead of President Osvaldo Dorticos, as originally promised. During the whole course of the Moscow rally, the Soviets and the Cubans alternated snub and countersnub. A final break seemed possible.

A lull ensued thereafter, during which Cuba's "maximum leader" was evidently busy reflecting on which way to turn. At one moment the old-line Communist leaders in Cuba were reportedly under house arrest. At another moment, more recently, Castro mournfully warned his people that they would thereafter have virtually no gasoline for their own use, easy for the Soviets, simply because the because the Soviets could not supply enough. Whereupon the Soviets replied, a bit snappishly, that Cuba could have as large quantities of Cuban sugar at three much gasoline as Cuba wished to pay

Now, however, the signs are that the maximum leader has concluded he had better bite whatever bullet the Soviets have been asking him to bite, while nonetheless maintaining his posture of political independence. The interrupted trade negotiations are at last to be resumed, with a reportedly high-level Soviet economic delegation going to Havana.

As ambassador to Havana, the Soviets have also just named a very senior diplomat. A. A. Soldatov. Meanwhile. some of the old-line Cuban Communists have been dusted off and trotted out for public inspection, while the real Moscow hundred-percenters, like Escalante, have been prepared for trial. A question remains concerning the bullet's dimensions.

The place to look for guidance is almost certainly the Cuban armaments program. Over a six-year period the Soviets completely re-equipped Castro's armed forces at a total cost of $2 billion, or around $300 million-plus per year. Replacement equipment is now being shipped to Cuba, but this should hardly cost more than $100 million a year,

Belt-Tightening

If the old concealed subsidy were to continue, that would leave Castro with a margin of around $200 million to spend on further Guevara-style external adventures, which the Soviets detest, or else to spend at home, in order to bolster Cuba's slowly but remorselessly declining internal economy. Castro's gasoline speech instead pointed to belt-tightening at home.

Since Guevara's failure and death, moreover, there has been no sign of any intensification of Cuban subversive effort in Latin America. There are clear indications, to be sure, that the Cubans will do everything they can, both with money and agents, to stir trouble in the American cities this summer. But this should be covered by the former cost of the Bolivian venture.

Maybe the Soviet economic delegation now going to Havana will end by announcing an even more inflated sugar price than was formerly paid. But the foregoing are the contrary signs. Copyright (c) 1968 The Washington Post Co.

Dr. Barnard's Own Story

By GEORGES MENANT

CAPETOWN-Among the great surgical breakthroughs of the century will certainly be listed the heart transplant operations of Dr. Christiaan Barnard.

In the following verbatim interview, the re-nowned South African surgeon gives the first medical account of what he actually does to remove a heart from one body and put it in an-

Here, in question and answer form, is his story:

First, was there a difference between the Washkansky and Blaiberg operations?

"None. The only difference is that in Dr. Blaiberg's case the donor died a natural death, while in the first case, Darwall died in a car accident, leaving doubt as to the preservation of the heart.
"The following narrative.

may be considered an accurate account of our method - but first let's recapitulate the facts up to the moment when I arrived at the hospital.

'Doctor Shirre, who heads the team of cardiologists, had decided that the patient's heart could undergo the transplant. The different hospitals in the district which were on the look-out proposed a possible donor. Doctor Botha, who heads the team of pathologists, estimated that the donor's blood and tissues howed a sufficient compatibility with the patient's. The operation could start. donor, who did not have long to live, was brought to the operating room and the patient was carried to the adjoining room.'

You say: "The patient who did not have long to live ..." Was this certain?

"Yes. And I wish that all malevolent comments would stop. When we say 'a possible donor,' we mean that before considering his blood and tissues, we consider his condition, Miss Darwall's condition was hopeless, as was Mr. Haupt's. Their brains were destroyed, Miss Darwall's by the impact, Mr. Haupt's by hemorrhage. Their deaths were only a question of

So the donor, still alive, was taken to the operating room?

"Yes. But his life, which was sustained by our apparatus, was nothing but artificial. While waiting for him to die we prepared to remove with the aid of a heart-lung machine. In the adjoining room, my assistants were also preparing a heartlung machine which had been supplied with fresh blood.

The heart-lung machine, is that the big apparatus which resembles an electronic computer? --

'Yes. It allows us to 'disconnect' the patient's heart during the operation. It is a very intricate apparatus, which takes the blood above the patient's heart and returns it below. The blood is purified and regenerated during the process. The heart-lung machine also makes it possible to cool or warm the blood, to increase or decrease the blood pressure and to add to the blood all the necessary components. As soon as the donor's death becomes imminent, the patient is placed under anesthesia and his right groin is opened, so as to disengage the femoral artery and the saphena vein."

What is the saphena vein? "It is the vein which runs Blong the leg — the one that is stripped during an operation for varicose veins, A drain is then placed in the saphena vein for intravenous injections and checking of the blood pressure. The patient's thoracic cavity is cut open and his heart is laid bare. pericardium is opened, the lower and superior venae as well as the aorta are isolated and sheathed with a cotton lace."

Then you can examine your natient's heart. What do you learn through that?

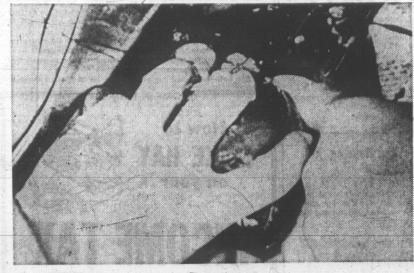

"In both cases, it confirmed that the heart was useless and that there was no other possible treatment other than the transplant of a new

And what happens to the onor during this time?

"He is reaching the end of his agony. As soon as his death is certain . . . '

How do you make sure of his death? "Well, through very definite tests such as: no reaction to the electrocardiogram for at least five minutes, no spontaneous breathing, no more reflexes. So as soon, as the donor's death is ascertained, a dosage of heparin is injected vent the blood from coagulating. Then the thoracic cavity quickly opened and an ision is made in the pericardium. But we must not the heart that we will use 'die.' We must act so that the heart will continue to be perfused, i.e., receive a blood irrigation. For this purpose a probe connected to a heartlung machine is inserted in aorta. Another one is forced into the right auricle through the atrial appendix to allow the blood to return to the machine. "The corpse's heart's derivation setting is then started, in order to maintain an artificial blood circulation. At the same time the blood is cooled off, which decreases the need for oxygen by the tissues and to insure better security for the operation. When the body temperature has dropped down to 78 (Fahrenheit), the probe inserted in the aorta is adjusted so as to aim in the direction of the valve. The flow of blood is reduced to 0.5 to the minute (about one tenth of the normal) by the machine's pump and the aorta is blocked in such a way that only the myocardium is perfused. The heart is cooled down to 60 degrees. Then the perfusion is stopped. Then I aorta beyond the innominated artery.'

"It is the first of the arteries which begin on the arch of the aorta. Then, I cut the lower vena cava at the diaphragm level, then the superior vena cava at the azygos vein level which is its last supplier. Then I cut the left and right pulmonary arteries, then the principal pulmonary artery. Finally, I cut the four pulmonary veins, which free the left auricle The heart is now completely exposed. The incision took altogether, two minutes.

"The probe is then auricle. The arterial probe is then disconnected from the heart-lung machine, as well as the intake probe which was placed in the left ventricle so as to prevent it from stretchleft in place; they will be connected later on.

"Now the heart has to be carried to the operating room where the patient is lying. This is done in a bowl in which has been poured a saline solution cooled to 50 degrees. During this time, the patient's organs have been connected to the heart-lung machine which is ready to take over. As soon as I bring donor's heart into the operating room. we start again its perfusion by connecting to the heart-lung machine extremities of the probes which were left in place on the heart."

How long had the donor's heart been without irrigation?

"Not even five minutes. Just the necessary time to make the proper connections, plus the time to walk twenty vards between the two operating tables.

"I am now next to the patient and I control the starting of the machine which will cut out the heart and take charge of its blood circulation.

The venous blood (vitiated blood) is canalyzed by a probe placed in the superior and lower venae cavas, and the blood (regenerated blood is inserted in the right femoral artery. While going machine, the through blood is cooled so as to bring the body temperature to 86

"I then proceed by making an incision in the patient's heart. I cut the aorta right under its opening and the pulmonary artery right under its valves. I cut off the ventricles from the base of the auricles at the back of the auriculo-ventriculary track. I cut the septum between the auricles as close as possible to the ventricles. The excision is done in order to leave in place a small part of the left auricular wall around the pulmonary vein openings and preserve part of the right auricle which holds the venae cavas. In this way I have kept a "stump" of the patient's heart: the superior and posterior, the main openings for the veins and arteries. I will adapt the donor's heart to

To adapt the bottom of a good heart to the top of a sick heart — does this not have disadvantages?

"No, because the bad part which is left is that which works less. The most important auricle is located in the bottom part. It supplies the heart in the patient's pericardiacal cavity. Now what is left to do is to adjust the donor's heart to the stump. I start by "sculpting" with the scalpel the bases of the left and right auricles. I cut out the base of the left auriculary wall around the entrance of the four pulmonary veins. the right auricle from the opening of the superior vena cava to the opening of the lower vena cava.

"Now I can start the transplant itself. I start by tving the donor's left auricle with a silk thread. Then the two auricular walls are sutured. The donor's pul-monary artery is adjusted to the proper length and anastomosed (sutured) to the patient's pulmonary artery with a continued suture made with silk thread Then I order the perfusion on the donor's heart to be stopped. I cut a piece of the aorta to adjust it to the patient's and the anastomoses are done with silk thread. I take off the clip which closed the aorta in order to allow blood irrigation of the myocardium (heart muscle) from the patient's aorta. I turn over the top of the left from the heart's left side and pierce with a hollow needle the right side to expel the air (one air bubble in the blood can be fatal).

"It is time to start the new heart. We begin by warming the blood in the machine, then by accelerating the circulation. After about three hours, I pull off the probes from the venae cavas so as to restore the patient's circulation to partly normal (in Washkansky's case, the heart had to be started by electrodes; in Blaiberg's it started by itself. We only had to help it for some time with the machine). "The top of the left ventricle is once more softly massaged and subjected to suction in order to expel the air. Then the hole which had been drilled in order to let the air escape is closed with silk thread. One minute later the machine is stopped. "Now the heart, completely filled with blood, beats by itself. The stitching is excellent throughout, and there is no reason for any new suture. The probe inserted in the aorta is then pulled out and the aorta mended with silk thread. At last the right auricle (opened on the corpse to insert the probe used to start the artificial heart circulation) is excised and the sides of the wound closed with

"After being treated with a warm saline solution, the pericardium cavity is closed vith catgut stitches. A drain is placed close to the heart. The sides of the sternum are brought together and sewn with stainless steel thread and the opening performed in the groin is closed with catgut and nylon thread. Everything is finished.

"A naso-tracheal tube has still to be put in place to maintain a mechanical air insufflation in the lungs as well as different control systems such as electrocardiogram, X rays and blood pressure. Then the patient is brought to his room.

It has been said that the first heart transplant has been performed in Cape Town because this country is still a country of pioneers, a hard country where human life does not have the same importance as in older "First of all this proves the ignorance of people who spoke that way. South Africa has always been one of the most advanced countries when it comes to heart surgery. It is here that the first artificial valves of plastic were made."

Nevertheless one great specialist, your colleague Dr. said: "Barnard broke the ice."

"I know Shumway very well, he has been my fellow-student in the United States and is my friend. The Americans as well as the Russians and the Europeans have the same degree of knowledge as we have.

"But you know that this is similar to the story of the people on the edge of the swimming pool. They all know how to swim and want to get in the water but they afraid that they will find it too cold. One of them gets brave enough to dive in. Then he surfaces to tell the others to come in, the water is good. they all at once dive in. But who has been the first

Why have we been the first in Cape Town? Because we are all of different national backgrounds. The mixture of bloods give daring

Many doctors who have criticized you sum up their opinion by saying that surgery must follow medicine but not precede it. Or, to put it differently, that as long as medicine will not have found ways to insure transplant will not be rejected, the surgeon will not have the right to make this "Once again this is ignorance. Each time that surgery took a chance medicine progressed. It was forced to.

Remember what happened with the kidney transplant.
Now the kidney transplants succeed. Why not the heart transplants? What happens is that the heart, which is a muscle, is less fragile than the kidney, which is a gland. The heart is a mythical organ supposed to be full of passions. Men who are called scientists are still victimized by this idea."

Professor Forssman, the German Nobel Prize winner, thinks that the heart transplant has opened a dangerous door. Who will receive the transplants? The richest? Or the more useful to the gov-ernment? To the party? Are we going to see one day the death-row convicts executed in surgical wards?

"This is nothing new. It is the problem of choice. The surgeon is faced by it every hour of his life. Each time when there are several sick people for but one bed, I have to choose. I do not choose the richest, the most prominent; rather, I choose the one who has the greatest need for medical care. This is my only criterion. Of course if I have two patients whose needs are equal and if one of them is a congenital idiot and the other one a genius mathematician, I will choose the second one.

"As for the death convicts, give us the honor to believe that we will never be the executioners. But why not perform the executions under aseptic conditions? It will be necessary to find hearts. I do not understand why so much has been said about the heart transplant when nothing was said concerning the kidney, CANADA AT THE CROSSROADS-I

Bill of Rights Would Alter Hundred-Year-Old Tradition

Constitution - making is usually thought of as a game for intellectuals that doesn't touch the everyday concerns of most citizens.

But the constitutional conference which begins in Ottawa Monday will drastically alter the relationship of Canadians to their governments and the century-old traditions by which we have been ruled.

The seminal fact about the federal government's insistence on making an entrenched bill of rights the centrepiece of the conference is that, for the first time, it will place the dividual 'citithe rights of parliament. Once the

Newman bill of rights has been accepted by all of the provinces (and it becomes entrenched in our constitution) it will signal a basic change in our system

Czechs Break With Soviet Secret Police

By LAJOS LEDERER

LONDON - Czechoslovakia has unexpectedly reopened the mysterious case of the death of Charles Jordan, 59year-old director-general of the American Joint Distribution Committee (the leading Jewish relief agency) whose body was found last August in the Vltava River, three miles from Prague.

Strengthened by recent changes in the political leadership in Prague, the Czech authorities have been giving strong hints that responsibility for Jordan's death lies not with the Czech secret police, as was earlier assumed — nor, as was suggested last week, with one the Arab missions in Prague - but with the R u ssian counter-intelligence agency.

Czechs have now offered closer co-operation with the AJDC in solving the mystery and have admitted that Jordan did not commit suicide - and that they knew this from the very beginning. They also gave strong hints foreign agents are now officially suspected of committing the murder.

This new attitude by the Czech authorities to Jordan mystery suggests that the new Prague leadership is determined not only to clear its reputation and repair the nage caused by the Jordan affair - but also now feels strong enough to challenge the underground activities of the Soviet secret police on Czechoslovak soil.

By PETER C. NEWMAN

What may well prove to be one of the climactic experiences of Confederation, the federal-provincial conference on Canada's Constitution, opens Monday in Ottawa. Mr. Newman, in a three-part series starting today, examines the implications of this meeting, beginning with the impact on the Canadian legal and social fabric of the proposed Constitutional Bill of Rights.

of government. A bill of rights will mean that a higher law has been placed in judgment over the federal House of Commons and over each of the provincial legislatures.

Once approved, the new bill of rights will allow the Supreme Court to interpret the laws of all legislative bodies, to judge the claims to inalienable rights of Canadian citizens. Parliament and the egislatures will be prevented from enacting those measures run counter to the rights bill.

This will represent a radical departure from the British system (which accepts the supremacy of parliament) to the American system (which uses its own Supreme Court to protect the inalienable rights of the individual). Until now the constitutional function of the Supreme Court has been imited to fixing the areas of jurisdiction between the federal and provincial levels of governments, such as the recent offshore mineral rights

Final Word

The new, entrenched bill of rights will give the final word on many areas not covered by the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights which became law on August 10, 1960.

That was limited strictly to the federal jurisdiction and as a simple act of parliament (rather than a constitutional amendment) It could be altered by any succeeding decision of the Commons. It was never meant as a law to protect Canadians from one another, but simply as a set of instructions to the courts on how to interpret federal laws — a worthwhile codification, of legal ideals. That, and nothing more, since most of the abuses to civil liberties fall within provincial jurisdic-tions which the Diefenbaker Bill couldn't touch

Apart from the fact that this new version of the Bill of Rights will be in the form of a will include fields of provincial jurisdiction, it will set out in specific detail just exactly what rights Canadian citizens will have guaranteed. (This will take us even closer to the American approach. The U.S. Bill of Riconsists of the first Rights amendments to the American constitution.) Specifically, the new Bill of Rights will deal with five categories of freedoms:

Political

Political rights: This includes freedom of speech; freedom of the press: dom of assembly; and freeof religion.

2. Legal rights: This means such things as freedom from arbitrary arrest; the protection of human life, liberty and property; and the principle of equality before the law.

3. Egalitarian rights: This deals with anti-discrimination legislation, such as fair ae-commodation practices; nondiscrimination in employment because of sex, race, color, creed or religion.
4. Economic rights: This involves the right to work; the right to the protection of health; the right to a basic education, and so on.

5. Linguistic rights: This is a new element being added to take into account Canada's special character as a bilingual nation. It will amount the acceptance of the constitutional changes recommended by the recent report of the Royal Commission on Biling ualism and Bicul-

All of these rights will be guaranteed under the new Bill of Rights, so that any citizen who feels wronged will have the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. If the court decides in his favor, federal or provincial

Since this will mean that the Court will have the final word on whether our legislators have deliberately or inadvertently violated any of our rights, the function and the power of the Supreme Court will be greatly

Bigger Court

This has led some constitutional lawyers, particularly from Quebec, to demand that Supreme Court be reconstituted into a constitutional court. This is a possibility, but a more likely solution would to enlarge the Court and establish separate panels of judges to deal with constitutional matters (at the moment, the Supreme Court consists of nine judges, three of whom are from Quebec). Another suggestion is that provincial governments making some of the judicial appointments.

Similarly, the provinces may gain a voice in making appointments to the Canadian Senate. This could flow out of the Bill of Rights Conference, particularly if it decides to reconstitute the Senate to play some—as yet undefined—role in supervising the application of the new Bill of Rights. (This would be strictly supervisory function, as compared with the Supreme Court's judicial role).

Transformation Speaking about the new concept inherent in his Bill of Rights, Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau said recently: "It presupposes a gigantic transformation of mentality. Should this happen, other useful constitutional reforms could be achieved without too much difficulty. If it cannot be achieved, on the other hand, it isn't worthwhile talking about other reforms, because Canada will be swep periodically by the ill wind of ethnic quarrels, and will become a sterile country for the mind, from which all peace and all greatness will be

Chrysler UAW Reach Agreement

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)-Production workers of Chrysler Canada Ltd. today voted over-whelmingly for the ratification of a new three-year agreement between the company and the union.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) Chrysler Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers reached agreement today on a new three-year contract, a Chrysler spokesman said.

The spokesman said no details would be released until union members ratify the agreement. Members of Local 444, UAW, in Windsor are meeting at 10.30 a.m. today.

The agreement covers about 10,000 Chrysler hourly-rated employees in plants in Windsor, Ajax and Etobicoke.

Chrysler was the UAW's prime target in negotiations with the Canadian auto industry. Ford of Canada and General Motors of Canada have been marking time pending developments at the Chrysler bar-gaining table.

The strike started Jan. 24. It came 69 days after the old three-year contract expired. Both parties agreed twice to extensions of the interim agree-Union officials sald key issue

Wage Parity Call Termed Brace by IWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Robert Bonner's call Tuesday for national wage parity has been interpreted by the International Woodworkers of America as a supporting brace in the southern Interior lumber dispute.

The 5,000 Interior workers are seeking wage parity with coast lumber workers, and have been on strike for almost five

"Bonner's statement provides his government with a good opportunity to persuade south-ern Interior lumber operators to egotiate a settlement on the pasis of eventual wage parity,' the IWA said Wednesday.
It said if wage parity is good for the national economy, it is good for B.C. Interior workers receive 50 ents an hour less than the $2.76 base rate paid coast workers.

IT'S MY

By Ernie Fedoruk

Some years ago, Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens better hockey player after reading-"The Power of Positive Thinking" and the publicity undoubtedly boosted the royalties for Dr. Vincent Norman Peale.

One story did, in fact, prompt me to urge a golfing acquaintance to contribute to Dr. Peale's bankroll. The golfer had exceptional talent-until he reached the green. On the putting surface, however, he was an absolute neurotic.

He didn't buy the book, and still can't putt.

The day Roger Bannister

DR. BRUCE OGILVIE ... the emotional angle heart and in his mind, that it would be that dull, drab day in 1954. He had carefully peak. The physical aspects of the jog around Oxford's track simply accounted for technical Psychology broke the barrier for Bannister.

Mental attitude is old hat in sports, yet the world of athletics "has just begun to scratch the surface" of psychological reasoning

"The next big break-through in sports," says Dr. Bruce C. Ogilvie, "will be the result of psychological conditioning. This is the area of the future." It may sound like a suggestion or prediction. But, coming from Dr. Ogilvie, I'm inclined to regard the statements on a more substantial basis. Almost a fact, if you wish. Victoria-born, the 43-year-old Ogilvie is a professor of psychology at San Jose State College. He visited his hometown Tuesday, time enough only to deliver two lectures at the University of Victoria and to grant a half-hour interview.

Because the two-hour evening lecture was such a delight. I'll forgive the university crowd for not allowing me to smoke In their Educational Arts theatre. I'm sorry I missed the afternoon bout, and wish the half-hour interview could have been stretched into a day or two.

Considering my age, 29 going on 28, Malcolm Taylor has no hope of extracting his tuition fee out of me. But I have to ask:

"How long have these lectures been going on?"

One future gate-crasher was assured long before educator
George Grant apologized to Dr. Ogilvie "that more did not attend." By actual count, 87 persons filled about a third of the comfortable theatre. Most of the listeners had the university stamp about them.

didn't see any Doug Andersons, from the junior Cougars, or a Frank Grealy from the O'Keefes soccer team, or the Dave of lacrosse. There were no golfers, nor anyone from the Allenby Street Little League. That was a shame.

One of the few faces I did recognize belonged to Gary Taylor, the Oak Bay high teacher. He was the only one, although all the phys ed lads were mailed notices of the lecture. Gentlemen, you and everyone else missed the biggest boat since Noah stopped buying his cedar from the MacMillan-Bloedel discount house. I'm not knocking Anderson, Grealy and anyone else that missed the lecture. In truth, it was only chance that attracted me to the lecture.

After Tuesday's revelation, it seems to me that some liaison may be required between the Greater Victoria Sports Council and the university. The lecture-area services at the university are, in most cases, available to the public-at-large. This is a treasure mine to the coach or manager who refuses to believe he "knows all." Lectures of the calibre presented by Dr. Ogilvie are bound to have an improving effect on any sport.

And, although he's back in California, Dr. Ogilvie's studies of the athletic personality are available. He has collaborated on numerous papers and a few books, the latest being "Problem Athletes and How to Deal with Them" (Pelham, 1966).

especially from the university level, there is a tendency to hoist four-dollar words on 10-cent listeners.

Dr. Ogilvie is one of the exceptions It was an education that was delightful and self-satisfying. To get there, I had to hustle my wife to Bill McAdams' steak house and then bring in a child-sitter.

It was well worth it, and I can hardly wait to find out the name of Fred Martens' next guest.

Laws hindering the sale of contraceptives and sweepstake tickets are "studid and obso-lete" Mayor Hugh Stephen said Wednesday.

The mayor made the statement during an address to the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria at Holyrood House.

"In these days of civil liberty and action leagues the job of law enforcement is becoming extremely complex and there is a tendency to forget that such liberty as we do enjoy is predicated upon law-observince," the mayor said.

He stressed that laws, good or bad, must be enforced until by due legislative process they are taken off the statute books.

"Having said this I must admit that there are some laws which by common consent are so universally ignored that enforcement becomes almost impossible.

Such a law is that regarding the sale of contraceptives. Another is the offering of sweepstake tickets.

Arthur Mayse

The other day, a young man of my acquaintance flipped the ignition key that usually sparks his brisk little four-cylinder Blitzen to quivering life. Nothing happened.

He tried a few times more. Then his family pushed under direction while he tried to shock his pet awake by whip-it into gear. Still no response.

Disgusted, the Blitzen's master phoned for a towtruck, which presently arrived with two tussles be tween man and the objects with which he clutters up his environment, it will surprise you not at all to learn that the motor began to sing like a bird.

Some refer to this contrariness as the perversity of the Inanimate. In simpler terms, Things hate People. They rarely rebel outright, but like sullen slaves, they miss no chance to hamper, hinder and confound their masters.

Take any small object—
coin, cuff link, walnut, spoon—and drop it on a level floor a foot or so from table, desk or bed. There's no reason why it shouldn't stay where it landed, or at least bounce outward.

But you know as well as I that it will flip under, usually far enough to require a spell of butt-in-air groping:

Sometimes Things pose as people to confound us. You dial your phone, and a metallic voice lilts back, "The number you have dialed is out of ser-viccee!" Maybe you never find yourself saying 'Thank you' to a recording. But I do, practically every time, and feel like a fool

I could keep on giving examples until the cows come home to the milking ma-chines, which no doubt have their own mean little bag of

Take, for instance, the other evening when we drove up to get a book of stamps.

Since we were somewhat illegally parked, I stayed in the car while Win approached the little red stampdispenser where it waited for business against a store wall. Win put in her quarter and pulled at the shiny plunger. machine not only didn't vield up the stamps, but refused to return her quarter. My dear one tugged again, dispenser on either side and yanked with her other hand. No stamps, no coin.

Next, she beat on its top with a mittened fist, and while I as an uninvolved spectator chuckled and snorted, whacked it under its square-cut federal-agent chin.

What the Thing expected, of course, was that its human antagonist would give up the struggle and leave it to its triumph. But Win fooled it. She turned away, then took a fast step back and tweaked the plunger. This time,

Consider that notorious little man-trap, the squatty card-board pyramid with coffee cream prisoned inside. Once. with just one of those Things, I managed to spatter myself, my wife, and about six other guests at a gin-and-sausage breakfast.

There are times, in fact, when it occurs to me disturbingly that Things have herited all the quirks, inconsistencies, and malevolences of those who make them. To illustrate, have you ever taken an aching tooth to a dentist, and had the pangs quit while you're tensely scanning one of those tired old magazines in his waiting-room?

Well, last week we took an ailing transistor radio down to be serviced.

TRAILER FREIGHT to and from the mainland will be moving through its own terminal in about a month's time as work on Canadian Pacific Rail-way Swartz Bay loading slip reaches the half way mark. Pacific Pile Driving Co. Ltd. has begun sinking piles for the slip and dolphins following comple-tion of foreshore rock and earthfill. The property adjoins B.C. Ferries terminal to the southeast, but access for freight units is by Dolphin Road and Canoe Cove Road from Patricia Bay Highway. Principal user of the facility will be the CPR's Trailer Princess, a ship converted to carry drop trailer units, but the VMD-built Doris Yorke, of F. M. Yorke and Sons towing, likely will be using the slip when necessary.

There's a television commercial where a boy fills a dish with dog munchies, stands back and shouts "Gra-a-a-vy Train" and dogs come running from all directions.

It makes Rick Shepherd sick. It reminds him of the month and a half he spent as an inmate of Riverview Hospital at Essondale - a nightmare that ended 13 months ago.

Waterproof Dresses Make Rainwear News

By Penny Saver

Despite the unpredictability of Victoria weather, the spring fashions are sneaking into the stores. As I walked past a dress store window recently (Scuffling through the snow, I might add) I was struck by the spring-weight coats and capes that were on display. I snuck inside and had a look at the first prophecy of what young Victoria girls will be wearing this year. Belts are big, as are zipper closings. Capes are coming into their own, and as are hipper closings. Capes are coming into mear own, and rainwear is more varied than ever. Skirts remain optimistically short. Spring colors? Brown, black, navy and grey, teamed with white. Navy with bright lime-green is another combination I have seen in many windows. For summer, brighter prints are predicted

With an eye to the weather, I took a double look at rainwear. The field is better than ever. Light-weight raincoats are as stylish this year as the most delicate dress coats. They come in prints and solid colors from gold shades to mauves. Low-slung belts and pleats abound, all in swinging short lengths. Absolutely new this year are rain dresses for warm spring showers. These are unlined, waterproofed poplin and feature zipper closings. Some have wide belts as well. They come in both prints and plain colors. One I was particularly struck by had a pattern of rust, orange, green and beige stripes. It was an unlitted style featuring a high bodice, drummer boy collar and zipper closing. The sleeves were long and cuffed. This dress is $18.

Rain capes are big news too. I am giving serious thought to one I saw in white with black quilted trim. Made of waterproofed poplin with a thin lining, this cape has a matching beret-type hat. The hat and cape set is $32.

There is a cape and dress ensemble in the navy and lime green. This ensemble is of a navy Melton cloth lined with a wool jersey. The lime forms a trim on both cape and sheath dress. This ensemble is $45. Another striking item in this lime shade is a $25 crushed vinyl coat with zipper openings. This gay coat has

Capes are invading the realm of pant-suits as well. I saw an attractive three-piece suit for $36. This lighweight ensemble is in a huge dog-tooth design of beige and blue. It includes skirt, slacks

Decisions Can Be Painful for the 4,406 Persons Unemployed

There are 4,406 people looking for jobs in Victoria today.

That's the number registered anyway at the Manpower and Immigration Dept. here. There are probably a great many more out of work, but that's the latest total of people registered on the federal job market.

The figure represents about per cent of the local work It compares with an unemployment rate of 4.6 per cent nationally, 6.3 per cent in But it's still easy to be unexcited by the fact that seven out of 100 people are one of them. The Times talked to Manpower and welfare officials and to some of the un-employed to try to determine seriousness of the jobless situation. Points of yiew vary.

Manpower's general manager George Bevis was pre-paring to speak to Victoria Kiwanis Tuesday on the same topic. He knows better than people that any unemployment is serious.

But he also sees some longrange improvement because the past 10 years the total of jobless in Victoria has averaged 4,340. At the same time the local work force has been increasing at the rate of 3,000 a year.
And back in 1958 we had 6,202 people looking for jobs in a work force that was smaller by 15,000. So the jobless rate then in Victoria was about 10 per cent.

Mr. Bevis has recently made a survey of employment possibilities. And except for the black page about shipyards, the future looks encouraging.

He says construction prosare moderately good with the new Simpsons-Sears Ltd. shopping centre building, university building and various apartment projects soon to start.

Home building has "some slackness" due to tight money but builders expect another

Business generally reports spotty sales but car sales are up over las, year and there is demand for factory-trained mechanics and body men.

Gocery wholesalers antici-ated growing volumes as population figures increase (There were 6,390 new arrivals in the district last rivals year.) Grocery retailers are concerned with rising labor costs but they also see volumes expanding.

Mr. Bevis says some bread compan officials may follow Winnipeg's lead and halt home deliveries which makes driver layoffs possible. But on the other hand, sales to stores and restaurants are growing some milk firms are branching out. They plan to deliver eggs, butter, bread and fruit juices along with the which means more drivers.

Department stores all had a good year and are looking for another. Real estate sales are up 33 per cent and they see the boom continuing for another two years—which opens sales opportunities.

Shipyards are the weak spot but even in the case of the recent mass layoff at VMD, there's been progress, Manpower reports.

Bearing in mind that Man-power totals of unemployed shipyard workers are far less than totals listed by various unions because many workers register with their unions only, one is told that 300 VMD workers were interviewed at Manpower.

Thirteen were placed in eastern or local yards or with B.C. Ferries. Forty-eight found jobs at HMC Dockyard. Twenty-five signed up retraining courses at Prince they've been dropping again. There are about 114 of the VMD work crew still on the books. And this is the most serious part of the unemploy ment picture locally, says Mr.

These are mostly long-time residents with homes and families here. Skilled in their specialized work, often of an age where change is hard to accept, they are still waiting for something to turn up.

Nobody is going to tell them Go where the work is. Victoria's industrial future is dwindling

Many of the workers regis-tered for employment through their unions have come to realize the truth in this. More than 40 were recruited through the union offices for work in Mississippi yards.

What is the answer for the othere? Retraining perhaps for the younger men, absorption for those who can adapt to the change from welder to milkman, in service industries. For some, early retire-

Urgent Debate Too Late

Speaker William Murray Wednesday decided five days was too long to wait to ask for a special debate on the grounds of a "matter of urgent public importance."

So he ruled out of order a refluest for the special debate or last Friday's shutdown of the Lytton Ferry by winter ice, made by William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooett).

Mr. Hartley, who took his turn in the Throne Speech debate an hour later, got his licks in anyway.

He said the ferry service should be improved and expanded to assure a continuous link for the Indian community of Westside with Lytton year-

He also urged the provincial government to absorb all private medical in surance such as MSA, into the B.C. Medical Plan when federal medicare program begins July 1.

He said there would be c o nsiderable administrative economies in a "single, comprehensive medicare service' for all British Columbians.

It forms part of an environment display being assembled in front of Hatley Castle. Later this year, an army Sherman tank and a navy four-inch gun will complete the exhibits.

The jet, stripped of its fittings and equipment, has been set on a 15-foot concrete pedestal. In 1956 the aircraft formed part of 462 Air Defence Squadron, Vancouver Island. It was later transferred to Chatham, N.B., where it was employed as an interceptor as part of the North American defence system.

After completing 2,000 flying hours, the jet could no longer meet safety requirements and was shipped to Royal Roads.

BRIDGE LESSON By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Newspaper Enterprise Assn Sometimes it is true that a little learning is a ngerous thing. The student followed four rounds of dangerous thing. The student followed four roun clubs, discarding a spade from dummy, while dropped the eight of NORTH diamonds. East led a A A 6 5 ♥ A 9 7 3 ♦ Q 7 6 rose with the ace and · 832 EAST right away. He led out the king and queen and ▲J97 ♥J104 ♦9432 ♣QJ ♦ 1085 ♣ AK 109 The student had learned all about the SOUTH (D) ★ K 3 2 ♥ K Q 6 ANT SOMETHING MOVED? principle of restricted choice and knew that ♦ AKJ ♣ 7654

dent remembered that East had shown up with four clubs to his partner's two, so that West was very likely to have started with four hearts. The student finessed the nine spot, and East collected the setting trick with the jack. The game was duplicate and when the results were in, it turned out that the student and most of the supposed good players had all made the heart play and gone down one. The poorer players who knew nothing about the principle of restricted choice had all played the hearts to break and made their contracts, and the professor had also made the game. "How come you didn't play the diamonds the way I did?" asked the student.

"It was all a matter of giving myself a slight extra chance," replied the professor. "I got the same club lead and diamond shift as you did, but I let the first diamond wide to clear is diamond, and led the three of hearts from ride to queen in dummy and led the three of hearts from that hand. East should have played low, but he saw no reason not to split his heart honors and put up the pack.
"When he followed low to the second heart lead, it was obvious to me that he had started with jack-ten-small. He wouldn't have played the jack from jack-small. McCOY ELECTRIC So I made the simple play of the ace and made my Rewire expert. Hydro financed. New and older homes. 479-9831 contract along with all the ordinary players."

History Repeating Itself?

The Washington Post "The enemy faced a contradiction. Unless he dispersed his forces, he could not occupy territory ... on the other hand, if he concentrated units to take the initiative, his occupation forces were weakened, making it difficult for him to hold territory . . .

"Meanwhile, we went gradually from autonomous companies to mobile battalions, then to regiments and divisions. The initial appearance of our divisions in battles in frontier regions marked our first major vic-tory, which increased the enemy's confusion."

Thus North Vietnamese Gen. vo Nguyen Giap, Hanoi's minister of defense, writing in 1961, described the strategy he used to defeat the French in the Indochina war.

And that strategy, according to communist sources recently interviewed by this correspondent in several Southeast Asian countries, is currently being repeated by North Vietnamese Viet Cong against the United States and its allies in Viet-

The Communists' version of their plans, not unlike official U.S. claims, is naturally colored by wishfull thinking. In the opinion of qualified Saigon informants, however, there is a certain plausibility in the Communist view of the present situation.

Forces_Shifting

As Hanoi and the Viet Cong see it, their forces are now shifting into large-unit opera-tions for the first time in the Vietnam conflict. This shift, they say, began in the battles of Loc Ninh and Dak To last fall, and is now continuing at Khe Sanh.

To some extent, their big operations are apparently aimed, even at the risk of high Communist losses, at in-flicting heavy casualties on the American forces in order to create a psychological impact in the U.S.

More significantly, the Communists assert, their present escalation is based on the conviction that the allies in Vietnam lack the manpower to respond to large operations and, at the same time, pursue their widespread logistical, defensive and pacification programs.

In short, the communists

now claim to have the initiative-bolstering this claim with the contention that the allies have not launched an important offensive since the "Junction City" operation a year ago and the penetration of the demilitarized zone last

Referring to Dienbienphu, these sources interpret that decisive defeat of the French less as a simple military victory than as a blow that, combined with the mood in Paris at the time, prompted the French to acceput a political settlement largely on Communist terms.

Within the current context, the communists evidently believe that American air power and mobility preclude likelihood that a facsimile of the Dienbienphu battle could occur. Instead, they appear to be hoping for a series of smaller Dienbienphus that will cumulatively achieve the same result as the 1954 drama.

They think this can happen because, in analyzing the present ratio of allied forces to their own, they stress that only a fraction of the total number of U.S. troops in Vietnam are actually available for combat.

By Communist estimates which do not differ greatly from U.S. figures, fewer than a hundred thousand of the more than half-million American soldiers in Vietnam are in combat units. The Cummu nists argue, moreover, that U.S. air power in the south has not grown proportionately to the increase in ground troops during the past three years. Therefore, the Communists

the objective of their military submit, the allies in Vietnam are becoming more and more immobilized under the burden of an overweight military establishment.

Short of Men

As evidence for this contention, they emphasize that the marines, originally designated to carry out slow "ink blot" designed to clear and pacify Viet Cong-held areas are instead pinned down to protecting positions like Con Thien and Khe Sanh.

At the same time, they say, their manpower shortage makes it difficult for the allies to react to a major assault without leaving parts of the country vulnerable to other Communist attacks. In order to meet their challenge at Dak To in early November, the Communists point out, the U.S. command transferred a brigade of the first air cavalry out of coastal Binh Dinh province. When the brigade returned to Binh Dinh after the battle, it found that a North Vietnamese regiment ad moved into the region.

Similarly, Communist sources indicate that the real purpose behind their present focus of Khe Sanh is to draw allied troops away from other sectors, therby exposing them to Viet Cong actions. Another factor inhibiting the allies, the Communists sugare alleged "deals" en South Vietnamese and Viet Cong commanders to maintain the statusquo in some regions. The former commander of the 25th division. Gen Phan Trong Chinh, dismissed by Saigon earlier this month for his inactivity, is said to have been a party to such an arrangement. The Communists claim to have struck virtual truce bargains other commanders.

While boasting of their present progress, the communists deny U.S. assertions that the morale of their troops has been hard hit by the in Vietnam. On the contrary, they submit that their current escalation into large-unit operations is a reflection of their high morale.

Drug Crimes On Rise

OTTAWA (CP) - The RCMP has complained of a "complete disregard for the law concern-ing drugs" by the hippie generation. But it says there is no seri-ous addiction problem among

The annual report of RCMP Commissioner M. F. A. Lindsay, tabled in the Commons by Solicitor-General Pennell, showed a 71.8-per-cent increase in offences under the Narcotics Control Act during the 1966-67 fiscal year ended last March 31.

This compared with a 14.9-per-cent increase in investigations of Criminal Code offences, to 170,746 from 148,670 the pre vieus year. Offences against property showed the greatest increase in the Criminal Code section, up 17.2 per cent. Sex offences increased by 14.7 per cent and offerces against persons by 13.1 per cent.

Murders, attempted murders and manslaughter were down

5.9 per cent. Discussing the increase in drug crimes, the report says the beat generation "became a fact ir Canada" in 1966. "This trait of human behavior was evident in virtually every inctitution of higher learning and in every larger city.

"The queer dress and the long hair is of no concern to police authorities. The beat genera-tion, however, poses a police problem in that it serves as a host to persons prone to the abuse of marijuana." By disregarding the law, the report says, members of the "beatnik element" deprive themselves of a normal future. During 1966, a total of 398 persons were charged with offences related to marijuana compared with 162 in 1965 and 78 in 1964. In addictive drugs, the main problem centred in Vancouver where more than half the 3,182 known addicts lived. Of 441 heroin-related charges laid in the whole country, 382 were in Van-

Azaleas Like Cool Nights

By HILDA BEASTALL

Potted azaleas are one of the most satisfactory house plants for winter months.

They continue blooming for four months, and then busy themselves with making new growths to p roduce more clusters of flowers by next winter. If the gar d ener remembers these plants are very similar to the which. Hilda azaleas bloom outdoors here in late May Cadieuz described the official their arly June. ments can be easily learned.

Because they bloom normally in late spring, our home temperatures of 65 to 70 deg. F. BUSINESSMEN MEET are to their liking during the day, but spring nights are notorlously cool and damp, indicating that our potted azaleas will do better if moved away to a cool room at night. Daily syringing with water helps to keep humidity high around the foilage.

MOIST SOIL A moist humusy soil in the pot enables all the blooms to open without dropping of buds, but the extremity of saturated soil must be avoided. Occasionally we find a plant has become so rootbound in its pot by February that no soil is left to maintain moisture at the roots. To be sure if this condition exists, knock the rootball out of the pot for inspection. If the ball appears to be entirely of roots, it should be repotted into one size larger pot, of comparative depth, using leafmould with a little soil to fill in around and a quarter inch on top of the ball.

The roots need not be dis-turbed. Soak the pot for two hours in a pan of water so that the old rootball and the new soil are thoroughly moistened.

In a plastic pot, the plant should then last a week or 10 days before needing another soaking. Clay pots require more frequent watering. Threads Hear 9-Piece Group

SERVICE UNIFICATION OFFICIAL

'Navy' to Be Buried at Sea

A small coffin symbolizing the death of the Royal Ca-nadian Navy was honored by Esquimalt sailors today.

The RCN ceased to exist at midnight when the three services officially united under the title Canadian Armed Forces.

Aboard the minesweeper HMCS Cowichan, Leading Seamen Wayne Weller and James Radford built a coffin bearing the letters RCN and a white cross inscribed Do Not Forget.

The two sailors, with 19 years' service between them, will bury the coffin at sea on Feb. 14.

There was no official ceremony to mark unification of the services and the only sign of a change today was a new flag flying over defence department property.

The new Canadian forces ensign is a white flag, with the Canadian flag in the upper left quarter and the new insignia of the unified force on the right. PARTIES OR WAKES

From Esquimalt to the Atlantic, the eve of unification was marked by indoor parties or wakes or both.

In Vancouver soldiers work black arm bands and the Jericho Beach base was draped in black. At Toronto's Downsview base, 300 servicemen staged a mock funeral in a darkened bar with a coffin made out of packing cases.

Four pallbearers carried the coffin which was painted in battleship grey and bore a large RIP sign. A memorial service was read for "the departing members," and two airmen, wearing the new bottle-green tri-service uni-form, took the salute.

But nowhere in Canada (a Canadian Press survey shows) were there any official outdoor ceremonies to mark the historic birth of a single service.

SAME YEAR No special ceremonies were scheduled for today, except at St. John's, Nfld., where Derek Critch, 19-a Newfoundlander born the same year as the colony joined Confederationbecame the first recruit to the newly-unified force.

At Halifax, a military spokesman observed. care one way or another-but the veterans are another matter. Some of them feel

Andy sends a World Naturally, no sensible person for his question:

The human family lived one for his problem and besides dawn of history came with the invention of reading and writing. The period of prewriting. The period history was much longer than the few thousand years of recorded history. And through much of this prehistory our sturdy ancestors lived the life of cavemen. By this we mean that they sheltered in caves and under rocky ledges. Eventually they learned how to warm their cave homes with fires. But for a long time, they depended only upon the caves and the skins of animals to shelter them from LONDON (CP) Sleeping Beauty, Rip van Winkle and other legendary super-sleepers may well be folk versions of a rare but genuine disorder, a Canadian psychiatrist says.

Alexander Bonkalo, assist-ant professor of psychiatry at University of Toronto, reports on the big-sleep affliction known as hypersomnia in the current issue of the British Journal of Psychiatry.

He details case histories of three young Canadian hypersomniacs who dropped off into genuine slumber for stretches lasting as long as 11 days. The three have been patients at Toronto Psychiatric Hospital at various times during the last 30 years.

Bonkala says Epimenides poet of ancient Crete who fell asleep in a cave and woke up 57 years later, is "probably the first recorded case of hypersomnia."

The Sleeping Beauty fairy tale and the Dutch legend about the man who slept for 20 years-borrowed by Washington Irving for Rip van Winkle—also may be based on real cases of hypersomnia, he suggests.

STUDIES CAUSES

Bonkalo's study attempts to clarify and classify types of the rare disorder, which has been recorded by doctors in Germany, France, Britain and the United States. Studying physical and mental causes of hypersomnia could aid understanding mental ailments with similar elements, including manic-depressive ill-

The three Canadian cases described include a youth, a girl and her older brother who each began to have "sleep attacks" in adolescence.

The youth had four sleep attacks-each lasting five or six days—in about six months when he was 16. Now in his early 20s and married, he drops off for a sleep of several days once a year in late spring or early summer.

The girl went to sleep for periods ranging from three to days on eight occasions between the ages of 16 and 21. "For no reason that could

Rembrandt Stolen

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)-A embrandt painting valued at $100,000 has been stolen from A Eastman House, police said Wed- W nesday. Portrait of a Young Man, painted more than 300 years ago, was willed by George Eastman, founder of Eastman Kodak Co., to the University of Rochester. The school lent it to East-man House, Eastman's former home, when the latter was opened as a photographic mu seum about 20 years ago.

SAIGON (Reuters) - South Vietnam imposed press

Premier Nguyen Van Loc announced the move as government troops braced for the possibility of new attacks by five Viet Cong battalions said to be in Saigon and heavy fighting was reported in major cities all over the country.

Loc also renewed a 24-hour curfew in Saigon for Friday and said the population should stay indoors.

SAIGON (CP) - U.S. infantry and armored units attacked the remains of Viet Cong forces in Saigon today as the guerrillas and North Vietnamese pushed their biggest offensive of the Vietnam war up and down South Vietnam for the third day.

It was the first time the Americans had brought major combat forces into South Vietnam's capital.

As fighting continued in Saigon, the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese appeared to have taken control of big parts of several major government cities and towns in the north. The situation appeared critical at many points.

Take, for instance, the other evening when we drove up to get a book of stamps.

Since we were somewhat illegally parked, I stayed in the car while Win approached the little red stampdispenser where it waited for business against a store wall.

Win put in her quarter and pulled at the shiny plunger. The machine not only didn't yield up the stamps, but refused to return her quarter.

My dear one tugged again, harder. Then she boxed the dispenser on either side and yanked with her other hand. No stamps, no coin.

Next, she beat on its top

City Student Can't Forget Nightmare Essondale Stay

By PETE LOUDON

There's a television commercial where a boy fills a dish with dog munchies, stands back and shouts "Gra-a-a-vy Train" and dogs come running from all directions.

It makes Rick Shepherd sick.
It reminds him of the month and a half he spent as an inmate of Riverview Hospital at Esson-dale - a nightmare that ended 13 months ago. "This male nurse thought that it was funny. He'd keep us waiting in the common room a minute or two beyond this time when were allowed to go to the cafeteria to eat. "Then he'd shout Gra-a-a-vy Train and stand aside for

But you don't give the male nurses any trouble. They are your best hope of getting out. The male nurse decides whether you get to see a psychiatrist.

"I got to see a psychietrist twice a week for five minutes. You wait for him and you run along beside him, talking all the time. You follow him.' But it's what the nurses say to the psychiatrists that decides your fate, Rick recalls.

"They bribed you. They'd tell you, 'You work hard and polish the brass, and we'll give a good recommendation to

I was scared I'd be there forever." Rick today is what older folks refer to as "a nice kid". He's taking his first year university at the Adult Institute. He's marired and he plans to enter the United Church ministry. He and his wife Mary, who works while he studies, have a small, spotless flat decorated tastefully with pictures cut from art magazines. There are books everywhere. Rick also makes good coffee.

Over a pair of steaming cups he tells about high school where he was a track star and a merit student. He'd had a falling out at home earlier, but he was able to put himself through Grade XII with an uncle's help, before going to a logging camp with hope of earning university fees.

He tried construction, too. But after two years on his own, working at jobs which didn't feed his hungry intellect, he found frustrations giving way to black despair. Acute depression the doctors call it. When a man gets to crying, he needs help.

Rick was sick for two years. He was admitted to Bay Pavilion here first, and he can't praise the community mental facilities too highly. He had his own room, showers, pleasant female nurses.

"The nurses here are in every sense professionals. The only fear is that you know you only have about three months. Then it's back to the community or onto Essondale."

Rick came out. He was taken into a local home and worked in a furniture store. Spreading his wings he hitchworked in a furniture store. Spreading his wings he hitch-hiked to New York and found himself alone in a big and dirty city. He flew back, sick again. He decided on his own to sign himself into Essondale.

"You're admitted, given a medical and a clean pair of pyjamas and a male nurse takes you to the dormitory. 'I was in an eight-bed dormitory in a big, old, poorly painted building. You can touch the beds on eithe you.

"You have no night table. You fold your clothes and put them on the floor under the bed. They are government clothes, clean, but hard to get in the right sizes.

For the first two weeks-an observation period-the patient stays in the common room which adjoins the dormitory.

"I was 18 but I was in with a group of men aged 30 to 50, "We'd still like to see the pictures published. I'm going to try to get them published sometime," Mr. Segar said this morning.

Subject of the hassle are a dozen art works, welded from old car parts and just 12 inches many of them unshaven and dirty. There are two couches in the common room. Because you are in there from 8:30 a.m. until 10:30 p.m. you run for one whenever someone gets up. Or you sit on a chair or the floor. 'There's a television set and a pool table but it's hard to get a game in. Ie's better at the ping pong table. "They issue tobacco and it's all over the floor. At this stage you eat in the hallway. The meals are anaemic and cold and the choicest servings are set aside for the nurses. They eat in their little office in the corner of the ward."

After two weeks, when you get privileges, you also have one-and-a-half work period. a one-and-a-neif work period.

'That to wash and wax floors. You're not forced to and it's not arduous, but you're expected to.'' (You've got to please the nurses if you want out—remember?)

"When I got privileges I went to the show and the cafeteria. At the show a homo put his arms around me, rubbed my leg and tried to kiss me.'

There's a pool, but the dressing rooms quickly get filthy. Or you can wander around the ground or go to occupational therapy. "I carved a tray."
(Conclusion Friday)

John Mcintyre and Detective Sgt. Robin Stewart delivered the following message to Robert Watt, publications director of the student Alma Mater Society: "We have perused the photographic materials which you tell me was to have been in . . . the Martlet Magazine and it is our opinion that publication of this material will be subject to presecution." Pedestrian Road Toll Hits Peak

Accident Upswing Calls For New Safety Program

Traffic experts in Victoria are hoping to organize safety council this year in an attempt to halt the rapid increase in pedestrian accidents in the city.

Traffic engineer Dave Campbell and police Inspector Dick Berry expressed concern at the latest 78 per cent boost in the pedestrian traffic toll and said the only answer was a more intensive education campaign.

JAYWALKERS

Of the total of 110 pedestrians killed or injured on city streets last year 43 per cent involved mid-block jaywalkers. The statistics released today also revealed that close to threequarters of the pedestrians injured came from two age brackets.

Some 27 per cent of the injured were over the age of 65 while 35 per cent were below the age of 10 years.

"I think the only answer is an active safety council which can conduct an intensive education campaign," Mr. Campbell said. "Victoria is one of the very few cities in Canada without such a

Since we were somewhat illegally parked, I stayed in the ear while Win approached the little red stampdispenser where it waited for business against a store wall. Win put in her quarter and pulled at the shiny plunger.

Tive machine not only didn't yield up the stamps, but refused to return her quarter. My dear one tugged again, harder. Then she boxed the dispenser on either side and vanked with her other hand. No stamps, no coin. Next, she beat on its top, with a mittened fist, and while I as an uninvolved spectator chuckled and snorted, whacked it under its square-cut federal-agent chin.

What the Thing expected, of course: was that its human antagonist would give up the struggle and leave it to its triumph. But Win fooled it. She turned away, then took a fast step back and tweaked the plunger. This time,

It makes Rick Shepherd sick.

"They bribed you. They'd tell you, 'You work hard and polish the brass, and we'll give a good recommendation to the doctor.

"I was scared I'd be there forever."
Rick today is what older folks refer to as "a nice kid". He's taking his first year university at the Adult Institute. He's married and he plans to enter the United Church

He and his wife Mary, who works while he studies, have a small, spotless flat decorated tastefully with pictures cut from art magazines. There are books everywhere. Rick also makes good coffee

Over a pair of steaming cups he tells about high school where he was a track star and a merit student. He'd had a falling out at home earlier, but he was able to put himself through Grade XII with an uncle's help, before going to a logging camp with hope of earning university fees.

He tried construction, too. But after two years on his

Rick was sick for two years. He was admitted to Bay Pavilion here first, and he can't praise the community mental facilities too highly.

He had his own room, showers, pleasant female nurses

"The nurses here are in every sense professionals. The fear is that you know you only have about three months.

Then it's back to the community or onto Essondale."

Rick came out. He was taken into a local home and worked in a furniture store. Spreading his wings he hitch-hiked to New York and found himself alone in a big and dirty city. He flew back, sick again. He decided on his own to sign himself into Essondale.

Pedestrian Road Toll Hits Peak

Accident Upswing Calls For New Safety Program

Traffic experts in Victoria are hoping to organize safety council this year in an attempt to halt the rapid increase in pedestrian accidents in the city.

Traffic engineer Dave Camp-bell and police Inspector Dick Berry expressed concern at the latest 78 per cent boost in the pedestrian traffic toll and said the only answer was a more intensive education campaign. JAYWALKERS

Of the total of 110 pedestrians killed or injured on city streets last year 43 per cent involved mid-block jaywalkers.

The statistics released today also revealed that close to threequarters of the pedestrians injured came from two age brackets.

Some 27 per cent of the injured were over the age of 65 while 35 per cent were below the age of 10 years. "I think the only answer is an active safety council which can conduct an intensive education campaign," Mr. Campbell said. "Victoria is one of the very few cities in Canada without such a

Chrysler UAW Reach Agreement

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)-Production workers of Chrysler Canada Ltd, today voted overwhelmingly for the ratifica-tion of a new three-year agreement between the company and the union.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) Chrysler Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers reached agreement today on a new ree-year contract, a Chrysler spokesman said.

The spokesman said no details yould be released until union members ratify the agreement Members of Local 444, UAW, in Windsor are meeting at 10.30 a.m. today. The agreement covers about 10,000 Chrysler hourly-rated em-ployees in plants in Windsor, Ajax and Etobicoke.

Chrysler was the UAW's prime target in negotiations with the Canadian auto industry. Ford of Canada and General Motors of Canada have OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's trade balance more than doubled to $537,300,000 in 1967 from 2000.

Wage Parity Call Termed Brace by IWA VANCOUVER (CP)

torney-General Robert Bonner's call Tuesday for national wage parity has been interpreted by the International Woodworkers of America as a supporting brace in the southern Interior lumber dispute.

The 5,000 Interior workers are seeking wage parity with coast lumber workers, and have been on strike for almost five

"Bonner's statement provides his government with a good opportunity to persuade southern Interior lumber operators to negotiate a settlement on basis of eventual wage parity. the IWA said Wednesday. It said if wage parity is good for the national economy, it is good for B.C.

Interior workers receive 50 cents an hour less than the $2.76 base rate paid coast workers,
